December 22, 2005

Dear Sir,

Please consider this Statement to accompany the Applicant's "Petition for Revival of an Application for Patent Abandoned Unintentionally under 37 C.F.R. § 1.137(b)".

The Applicant submits that the entire delay in paying the issue fee due on July 8, 2005 was unintentional and resulted from an apparent mixup in the handling of clerical matters. I, the undersigned, am the Applicant's representative working in my firm's Washington, D.C. office. I manage all of my patent prosecution cases using a docketing system located in my firm's Philadelphia, PA office. I periodically receive a docket report from our Philadelphia office that includes due date actions for my cases. Our Philadelphia office is and has been for several months in the process of changing from one docketing system to another.

Our document records indicate that I directed a staff member to prepare and file a request for continued examination (RCE) in June, 2005, well prior to the issue fee due date (July 8, 2005). This request was necessary to enter into the record, after allowance, prior art reported from a foreign examiner in a foreign prosecution of substantially the same application so that the art could be considered by the examiner. Our records indicate that although the request and the Information Disclosure Statement were drafted, it appears that they were not filed as I directed.

Having given instructions for the RCE to be filed, I red-lined the issue fee date on my docket report so that I would not later give instructions to pay the issue fee. Therefore, the issue fee was not paid. To compound the delay, my legal assistant was out of the office for illness from July through August and resigned from the firm in October. During that time, she was replaced by temporary personnel on rotation. One of those persons apparently filed the Notice of Abandonment of this application in the case file without bringing it to my attention. I only discovered the unfiled RCE, the passed issue fee date, and Notice of Abandonment while reviewing several patent files for the same assignee.

Thus, the passing of the due date for the issue fee was completely unintentional and should not prejudice the applicant.

Respectfully submitted,

Joseph R. DelMaster, Jr.
